Who has actually invented the CURRYWURST?

Two German cities – Hamburg or Berlin! According to the author Uwe Timm the home of the CURRYWURST is in Hamburg. After the Second World War Lena Brückner came across the CURRYWURST by a pure coincidence. She tripped over when she held curry in one hand and ketchup in her other hand. After this rather coincidental detection she sold the first CURRYWURST at the Großneumarkt in Hamburg where the dish became famous. In contrast to this theory there is the belief that the beginning of the CURRYWURST is to be found in Berlin where Herta Heuwer opened up the world's first CURRYWURST shop at the Stuttgarter Platz on September 9th in 1949. Herta Heuwer has a patent on her recipe for the CURRYWURST which was issued on January 21, 1959. Meanwhile, there is the first CURRYWURST museum in the world in Berlin
